Sweep away apathy? Mayor Kay Barnes and City Council candidates endorsed by the Citizens Association and Forward Kansas City, gathered on the steps of City Hall to encourage voter turnout. The last municipal primary election four years ago only drew 28 percent of registered voters – 53,138 people – just about 10 percent of the city population.Pictured from left to right (front row): Mayor Kay Barnes, Saundra McFadden-Weaver, Councilman Alvin Brooks, (middle row) Bill Skaggs, Councilwoman Bonnie Sue Cooper, Councilman Chuck Eddy, Councilman Troy Nash, (back row) Councilman Terry Riley, Deb Hermann, Councilwoman Becky Nace, Jim Glover and John Fairfield.
