New Planning, Zoning Chair Ready for Larger Role on New Council

As the new city council begins to shape an agenda for the next four years, all eyes are on City Councilman Troy Nash, 3rd District-at-Large. Councilman Nash, first elected in 1999, served four years as Vice Chair of the Planning, Zoning, and Economic Development Committee. As he enters his second term, he was appointed by Mayor Kay Barnes as Chair of the Planning, Zoning and Economic Development Committee, Vice-Chair of the Budget and Audit Committee, and Committee Member on the Neighborhood Development and Housing Committee.

"I appreciate the Mayor giving me this opportunity to serve the Citizens of Kansas City in a larger leadership role. As we move forward on development priorities in the City, including downtown development, I have a responsibility to ensure that the 3rd District's needs are met at the same time," stated Councilman Nash.

In his new role as Chair, Councilman Nash has several progressive goals for the Planning, Zoning and Economic Development Committee, including 1) working with neighborhoods, the City and developers to develop a comprehensive economic development policy; 2) re-vamping the City's zoning ordinances, which have not been updated since 1954; and 3) educating neighborhood and community groups about the development process and making sure they are involved at every stage of the development process.

Councilman Nash holds a B.S. in Economics, a law degree and is currently completing a Ph.D. in Economics.
